1 collections. This new medium has vastly expanded the collectable market and has created a
2 new type of collector. Unfortunately, as individuals have been able to use the Internet to add 3 to or sell their collection they still must use old and archaic printed price guides to calculate 4 values of individual collectables and entire collections. Often these calculations of 5 collections are inaccurate and can take hours to compile.

6 U.S. Patent 6,108,639 relates to a collectible conditional purchase offer management 7 system for receiving and processing individual conditional purchase offers from buyers for 8 one or more collectibles, such as coins, stamps, art prints, comic books, baseball cards,
9 jewelry, or other used or secondary market goods. If a seller accepts a given conditional 10 purchase offer, and ultimately delivers goods complying with the buyer's conditional 11 purchase offer, the buyer is bound on behalf of the accepting seller, to form a legally binding 12 contract.

13 U.S. Patent 5,841,265 relates to a method and apparatus for creating a computerized
14 market for used and collectible goods by use of a plurality of low cost posting terminals and 15 a market maker computer in a legal framework that establishes a bailee relationship and 16 consignment contract with a purchaser of a good at the market maker computer that allows 17 the purchaser to change the price of the good once the purchaser has purchased the good 18 thereby to allow the purchaser to speculate on the price of collectibles in an electronic 19 market for used goods while assuring the safe and trusted physical possession of a good with 20 a vetted bailee.

21 U.S. Patent 6,085,176 relates to a method and apparatus for creating a computerized
22 market for used and collectible goods by use of a plurality of low cost posting terminals and 23 a market maker computer in a legal framework that establishes a bailee relationship and
